

Short term assignment: law students

Keen to work on trade and development? A client of us – a small trade advisory firm in Brussels – is looking for a student with some background in indirect tax and/or trade law, to support the development of a training module on 'trade compliance for e-commerce sellers in developing countries'.

On the basis of a publication, you will help to prepare a set of 150 power point slides. The assignment is for 5 days work, and due for 20 October.

Profile: interested in (international) trade law and keen to work on projects for developing countries, being able to work with power point would be great.

Send an email to xavier.demoor@condugo.com

Greetings

Xavier De Moor

CEO Condugo

Condugo is a SME advising large companies on climate change related activities.